EGULATIONS ON
ROUT FISHING

ray, Va.- Two regulations deed to keep trout fishing a sport s been adopted in the Shenanh National Park.
ark Superintendent Guy D. Ed-ds said the regulations require all fish under nine inches be wn back and limit anglers to use of artificial lures.
It may seem incongruous that catch size restriction has been sed," he declared, "in view of fact that some states have en-ly abolished size limits on trout." ut, he continued, ". . . the Park rice must preserve the native and qualified experts on trout d trout fishing say this can be ne only by reducing the kill of d fish." Recent studies in Michigan," he ded, "show the quality of fishing native brook trout was improvtremendously by increasing the al size restriction on trout in cer-streams from seven to ten hes."
"The use of artificial lures," he ded, "is in keeping too with the rrent and widespread trend to at trout fishing as a sport rather an a meat-fishing proposition.
Experiments show that only 5 to per cent of fly-hooked fish die m hooking and handling but 80 90 per cent of the bait-hooked e succumb to injuries," he said.
The fishing season in the Blue dge Mountain Park, where spring s beginning to show itself, will be-May 1 and continue until Sep-mber 10.
Anglers will be limited to the session of eight fish a day. Ed-ds said no special Park License needed but any fisherman will ve to have a Virginia fishing ense.
Fishing in the National Park has en prohibited during the past two ars because of repeated floods d droughts. Edwards said observa-ns made by the U. S. Fish and dlife Service last year showed stantial improvements in the mbers of trout compared with the es measured in 1954.
